The papers collected here were presented at the Junior Fellows Conference, held at the Institut für die Wissenschaften vom Menschen in Vienna, Austria, on 8 December 2000. This conference was both an extension as well as a cumulation of the Junior Fellow Seminars conducted at the IWM during the Fall of 2000. These seminars, and the Junior Fellows Program generally, are occasions for discussion and friendly argument across a spectrum of nationalities, political perspectives, and academic specialties. On a personal level, the Junior Fellows Program facilitates the delightful (and yes, extraordinary) opportunity to participate in a first-rank intellectual community where knowledge and varied perspectives are exchanged and shared across traditional disciplinary lines. First and foremost, we extend our thanks and appreciation to Janos Kovacs, Permanent Fellow at the IWM, who facilitated the Junior Fellow Seminars and imbued the discussions with his graciousness, humor, and erudition. Cordial appreciation to Cornelia Klinger whose insights and direction in the field of gender studies enriched our research. We would also like to thank Krzysztof Michalski, Director of the IWM, for inviting us to participate in the Junior Fellows Program. Much thanks and gratitude go to the staff of the IWM: Traude Kastner was for many of us our first contact with the IWM. She fielded a dizzying array of queries regarding travel, accommodations, and life in Vienna with friendly aplomb. Special thanks also go to Katharina Coudenhove-

Kalergi. Katharina assumed Traude's position with the same high standards of professionalism and personal warmth and grace. Much appreciation goes to Klaus Nellen for overseeing the production of the publication and to David Soucek who answered all questions regarding computers and patiently reformatted the publication to an accessible form. Bettina Steckelhuber and Ted Paul greeted us warmly every morning at the front desk. Lidia Antonik and Eilin Derakshan provided a hot, delicious lunch everyday. Susanne Fröschl, John Smith, Iris Strohschein, and Anita Traninger all enlivened lunchtime conversations and contributed greatly to the friendly and charming atmosphere of the IWM. To all of you we, the Junior Fellows, are in your debt; one day we hope to repay your kindness.
