What is the reason for re-considering religion? What is the philosophical challenge it poses? What can be the meaning of some “return of the religious” when—at least in the European context—religion seems to have ceased giving life and offering “sense”? Addressing questions of religion today, we often seem to be hinting at a mere spectre, the grey-some shadow in an empty cave that Nietzsche speaks about in his Gay Science.

Yet it is precisely this shadowy nature of religion in the secular world which might pose a problem. On the one hand, looked at from inside of religious worldviews, the public pressure on religion is felt as repression and a denial of its right to exist. This paves the way for all kinds of radicalizations and simplifications. A religion deprived of its cultural rooting is more likely to fall prey to the stubborn insistence on its own dogmatic supremacy and will enforce it by almost any means.

French political scientist Olivier Roy has recently described this attitude as “sainte ignorance” (English title Holy Ignorance. When Religion and Culture Part Ways). On the other hand, in the eyes of the secular-scientific worldview, this development once more confirms the reservations against religion. It leads to the outright denial of religion’s meaning for today and pushes religion even further back into its niche of seclusion. This reinforces religious dogmatic self-immunization (thereby corroborating its seeming incompatibility with the modern world and weighing the visible circle of ignorance), but it also deprives the secular world itself of a great deal of its historical and cultural sources. As a result, the dominant intellectual landscape of our globalized world is ever more becoming a wasteland of sense and truth.

In response, Jean-Luc Nancy put from it his point of view as a philosopher—not as a believer or non-believer. It seems therefore that it should be the task of philosophy today to work on the “mutual dis-endorsement” of religious and secular scientific worldviews.

Over recent years, research at the IWM has increasingly dealt with questions of religion and secularism. A lecture series entitled Beyond Myth and Enlightenment aimed at a reconsideration of religion beyond old dichotomies. Speakers included, among others, Islamic scholar Gudrun Krämer, sociologist Martin En-drew, as well as philosophers Ian Gregisch and Hans Joos. The lectures provided vivid debates on different aspects of the dispensation of religion and challenged the modern, perhaps all-too secular, self-conception.

This series, which ran from 2011 to 2014, was a cooperation of two FWF-funded research projects directed by Ludger Hagedorn (IWM) and Michael Staudigl (Institute for Philosophy, University of Vienna). Both projects evolved out of a phenomenonological perspective that involves “bracketing” ideological debates in order to focus on underlying structures of meaning (Sinnstrukturen).

Especially in the context of debates on religion, this approach enables us to clarify religious attitudes and implications free of the constraints of the short-sighted dogmas of theism or atheism. It is not only the proximity of the two terms in logics (one is simply the negation of the other), but rather the dogmatic character of both standpoints that retains the essence of what it negates. If, as Jean-Luc Nancy holds, “all contemporary thinking” will once be seen as “a slow and heavy gravitational movement

The Czech philosopher Jan Patočka (1907–1977) is considered one of the most important Central European thinkers of the 20th century. Having studied in Prague, Paris, Berlin and Freiburg, he was one of the last students of Edmund Husserl and Martin Heidegger. He was a co-Founder and speaker of the civil rights movement Charter 77. On 13 March 1977, shortly after the publication of this declaration, he died after a series of police interrogations. His writings include reflections on history and politics, essays on art and literature, shadows in ancient philosophy as well as an inspiring history of modern ideas.

The research focus on The Philosophical Work of Jan Patočka at the IWM, initiated in 1984, aims at collecting, exploring and disseminating his oeuvres. Per that purpose, an archive was established at the IWM in close collaboration with the Patočka Archive in Prague. It has provided the basis for numerous publications in various languages and projects, such as the current project: Patočka: Christianity. Jan Patočka’s Concept of Religion and the Crisis of Modernity—funded by the Austrian Science Fund (FWF grant no. P22528S). Further details on: www.iwm.at/research/patocka

continued on page 20

Religion and the Crisis of Modernity

BY LUDGER HAGEDORN

Conference
Human Existence as Movement Patočka’s Existential Phenomenology and Its Political Dimension
June 3–5, 2014, Vienna

Program
June 3, 2014
Keynote Speech:
Marcia Sá Cavalcante Schuback: Esboço, Ente, Estande—Und Ethik Chair: Ludger Hagedorn

June 4, 2014
Session I
James Dodd: Swiss History Chair: Klaus Nellen

Session II
Susanna Lindberg: After the Earthquake. Questions to Patočka’s “Phantome des Movement” Chair: Ludger Hagedorn

Session III
Ludica Užírk: Dostoevsky: A Smelltrometer of Dismemberment. Patockian Reflections Chair: Sandra Lehmann

Session IV
Gustar Strauberg: Jan Patočka and the idea of Politics Chair: Jan Frei

Peter Tranyi: Dar UmordiWhane. Anmarranju zu Jan Patočka Achte. Was ist Existenz? Chair: Jan Frei

June 5, 2014
Session V
Ciaran Summerton: Three Perspectives of Politics and History: Patočka, Hayek, and French Pradhom Chair: Marcia Sá Cavalcante Schuback

Session VI
Hans Rain: Life after Death Chair: Michael Staudigl

Agustín Serrano de Haro: Aren’t the idea of Totalitarian Elements after the Death of Totalitarianism Chair: Michael Staudigl

Session VII
Jakub Homelka: The Spiritual Person: A Link between the Existential Movement and ‘Non-Political Politics?’ Chair: Klaus Nellen

Participants
Ivan Drůžek
Co-Director, Center for Theoretical Study, Charles University, Prague; Founder and Director, Jan Patočka Archive, Prague

James Dodd
Associate Professor of Philosophy and Chair, New School for Social Research, New York

Jan Frei
Research Fellow, Czech Academy of Sciences; Specialist Assistant, Jan Patočka Archive, Prague

Ludger Hagedorn
Research Director, IWM

Jakub Homelka
PhD candidate in Sociology, Charles University, Prague

Sandra Lehmann
Lecturer in Philosophy, University of Vienna

Susanna Lindberg
Adjunct Professor of Philosophy, University of Tampere

Klaus Nellen
Permanent Fellow, IWM, Co-Founder, Eurozine

Hans Rain
Full Professor of Philosophy, Södertörns Högskola

Marcia Sá Cavalcante Schuback
Full Professor of Philosophy, Södertörns Högskola

Agustín Serrano de Haro
Senior Researcher, CCHS Madrid

Michael Staudigl
Lecturer in Philosophy, University of Vienna

Gustar Strauberg
PhD candidate, School of Culture and Education, Södertörns Högskola

Ciaran Summerton
Graduate Student, Social Sciences and Humanities Department, Murdoch University, Perth

Peter Tranyi
Professor of Philosophy, Bergische Universität Wuppertal

Ludica Užírk
Senior Lecturer in Philosophy, Murdoch University

This conference, generously supported by the Austrian Science Fund (FWF), Zentrumskollegium and the Austrian Research Council, was organized in cooperation with Södertörns Högskola and Murdoch University.
Instead of being dazzled or frightened by the fictional character of money, we can and should analyze the political legitimacy of the institutions that shape and govern it.